It's a very successful game. You mostly get frustrated but the feel after the success.incredible!. I remember when using the keyboard to move the camera became obsolete, this game doesnt.. The controls are way to slippery to make this game fun.. Suprisingly fun controls are a bit weird but after a bit u get the down. Had this been a free flash game on Newgrounds, it'd still be rather disappointing. Pros: I frankly can't think of anything that this game does well. Cons: Bugs galore - you're frequently find yourself falling through platforms, especially if you drop from on high. It seems the momentum just makes you smash right through them. The controls are nothing short of dreadful . They're too sensitive and floaty at all once, and trying to stick a landing makes the platforms feel like they're covered in oil. It took me quite a while to figure out how the point system even worked, as the game doesn't give you any information whatsoever, and to this day I still don't know if the pickups even do anything other than mildly annoy you. The slow-motion one is particularly annoyed, as it's not a smooth transition into real slow-motion, but just feels like you're suddenly playing at a quarter of the framerate. Once you're halfway to 25.000 points, platforms start moving - and apparently the devs didn't know how to make the character move with them, so they just slide away from under you. Conclusion: I would've gotten tired of this game in 20 minutes if I had found it for free in Miniclip. It's simplistic and poorly put together. Far too amteurish for anyone to actually pay money for it. But I suspect most people who own this got it through bundles or something similar. Achievements: Simple enough, but dreaful to get. Getting to 25.000 points involves reaching the point where the platforms get smaller, are further away from each other, and move. It's not a particularly fun game to get a quick 100% on. If you're considering buying this just for the chieves, don't bother.
